Decent business development in a tougher market; chg est. & PT

Following Allgeier's decent Q3 reporting we revisited our model. Despite the solid performance in the first nine months of 2012 we expect less dynamic earnings growth due to a challenging market environment in IT services which should temporarily burden the pricing.

Allgeier had a good Q3 with 13.8% sales growth yoy to € 107.7m (eH&A € 106.3m). However, the sales growth should have been foremost driven by the first time consolidation of the recent acquisition targets Nagarro and TECOPS (1 month each) as well as some smaller acquisitions. Overall, the organic sales growth should have been in the low single digit range indicating the tough market environment which was also witnessed at Allgeier's peers.

The operating EBITA (which is adjusted for all PPA related effects and hence gives the best picture of Allgeier's operating performance) increased slightly disproportionately by 15.6% to € 5.2m (eH&A € 5.4m). The EBIT on the other hand fell by 14.6% to € 3.0m (eH&A € 3.5m) due to significantly increased PPA amortisation.

H&A estimates are adjusted for higher PPA amortisation and assuming a slightly higher personnel expense ratio implying temporary price pressure in IT service projects. Consequently, the EBIT forecast for 2012E and 2013E is trimmed by 7%. However, this does not change the investment case given that the EBIT is still expected to grow by 66% in 2013E. The growth expectation is based on the assumption that the new subsidiaries will be fully integrated and hence, integration costs should be reduced and PPA related amortisation should only slightly increase.

Operating CF is expected to decrease slightly by € 1m in 2012E to € 18.6m assuming that the dynamic growth should tie up more working capital. However, most of the negative development after 9-months (c. € 9m lower operating CF) should reverse in Q4 as the working capital structure should improve towards the end of the year. Assuming no pay-out for acquisitions, Allgeier should be able to generate c. € 15m FCF (i.e. € 1.60 per share) underpinning the cash generative nature of the business. Buy. PT of € 20 (old € 21) is based on FCFY 2013E.
